I'll try and keep this brief to save you from listening to what I have to say but I want to make it clear that I do not want to run Brick Hill anymore. However, I think that it is more important at this moment that Brick Hill continues to thrive as a platform and a community. Between January and July I did make a handful of attempts to negotiate a transfer of ownership with Jefemy, but these fell through and apparently the rest of the staff team weren't made aware of these.

Unfortunately, with the staff resigning this means that I have been forced to step briefly back into the spotlight, but believe me I am eager to return to having zero presence here.

4:28 PM I still want to put Brick Hill into the hands of people who will see its potential through. Having managed Brick Hill for most of the past six years, I know the value so many of you have placed here, not to mention the hundreds and even thousands of dollars that have been invested because you trusted us. All of that being lost would be such a sad waste, especially knowing how great our plans were for this site and how optimistic you all had been for our future.

Because of this, my intentions for the meantime are to pick up the plans I had for Brick Hill last year and to appeal to investors so we can harbor the funding that Brick Hill needs to pursue serious development of the site, client, and eventually marketing. I want this growth to instill confidence back into Jefemy or Maxed and open them up to negotiating a transfer again so that I can finally back away from this.

Regardless of what you think of me, please know that I only want the same as you for Brick Hill and I know just as much as you do that this platform has so much more integrity than this ugly chapter and it deserves so much more respect.

A handful of people have contacted me to legitimately help move Brick Hill through this period and so I have the confidence that this plan will work for the interim. You can contact me if you also want to help push the platform past this, or once an initial team has been set up you can talk to them if you don't want to talk to me.

I am not going to address the controversy here. There is a lot that I could say, but addressing it now would change nothing and only stir emotions. I do not want my presence on Brick Hill, and I hope that this is the only message I will ever have to send here. That said, I get that a lot of you will still have strong feelings towards me and I am sorry. Feel free to air those grievances in my DMs if you have to and I will be sincere. This whole thing is so intensely emotional and I am incredibly sad to be in this position.

I have never taken for granted the joy and fulfillment that building this platform for each of you gave me. I have such a deep respect for every individual who has worked here from its very beginning and up to now and who loved being here with such a genuine passion. I owe all of you such a debt of gratitude and I am so completely ashamed and embarrassed and sorry that I put us here.

I will be completely honest and say that I have had offers to buy out the site, both from within the community and from outside organizations. I don't want to sell Brick Hill; ownership needs to go back to competent and passionate people who are a part of this community, rather than to strangers with profits in mind. I have faith in this plan, but if there isn't support within the community for an interim team keeping Brick Hill moving until we attract investors, and if negotiations with Jefemy or Maxed or somebody else still come to nothing then sadly I might be compelled to consider selling rather than let the site die.

This whole thing is so painful and I promise it will finally be over once this is done. I'm sure this won't happen, but please don't try to undermine this announcement or disregard the genuine attempt at progress here otherwise Brick Hill will die at these crossroads. I'll try to have the Discord and the site back up and open to some capacity by the end of the week.

Let's hope this will be quick and as seamless as possible so that Brick Hill can be put into the hands of people who will see its potential to the fullest.

Thank you.
